

There was this average guy that fell deep in love with she
But you would have never acknowledged this information
He was one of those guys that kept to him self with full isolation
However, one day he recognized a beautiful soul
She made him loose all of his control
They were constantly together
She took him away to another place
They often tended to embrace
Between them lingered no space
It remained a year long phase
His life had changed
Time began to appear rearranged
He'd never felt so insane
He couldn't even remember how it felt to complain
An obsession called addiction came about
And now this girl he beloved caused him much more doubt
He wouldn't tolerate to leave her side
Even through all the good, he began to lie
It was all very complicated
This female made him feel dilated
The girl was now all of his concentration
Translated into all of his silent conversation
Now, this is where things turned hectic
It was like he became septic
He was caught in all her friction
This girl felt complete contradiction
Never apart and full of apprehension
When he left her, he felt a burning state of tension
At first, she was his soul mate, but the after effects would not wait
He started to grasp what was true
He didn't date this girl for the right reasons or for what she couldn't do
He wanted to break up
But she was so glamorous and it was way too tough
He'd be below everyone else
Or at least, it was how he felt
The world was watching him make his decision
Comparable to a doctor's first attempt of making an incision
It was intense
He'd misplaced all his common sense.
His parents obviously disapproved
To him, his old friends were just "equally as rude"
Then something made the tables turn
Maybe this could aid us to all attempt to learn

"They kill, they trick, they lie" is what his conscience should have remembered

One good friend let him know that girls were temporary fenders

She was such a bad example, such a delinquency

For such a lengthy frequency

Unfortunately he died at the end, which is difficult to comprehend

She killed him... and she is Tobacco.